Universal Realigns Top Leadership to Continue to Keep Pace with Client Needs

Evans named Chairman; Vasami becomes CEO; Diulus is COO

Houston, Texas (March 19, 2007) Universal Weather and Aviation, Inc. announced that it has restructured its leadership structure in order to keep pace with the rapidly growing business aviation industry and its clients' needs.

A new Universal[®] Office of the Chairman has been created, consisting of former Chief Executive Officer Greg Evans, now assuming the role of Chairman of the Board; former Chairman Marjorie Evans, now in the role of Vice Chairman; and Ralph Vasami, who is now Chief Executive Officer in addition to President.

"We have realigned our leadership structure so that we have the right people in the right jobs, and are continuing to equip our employees to succeed so that our clients succeed," said Greg Evans.

Additionally, former Vice President of Network Services Dave Diulus has been named Universal's new Chief Operating Officer (COO) and Executive Vice President.

"This realignment will allow Ralph to increase his external focus and spend more time with key industry influencers and associates, as well as clients and partners, as we continue to develop our strategic growth plans," said Evans. "Dave will now manage our day-to-day business operations. He brings more than 20-plus years of aviation services experience, as well as excellent business and team management skills, customer-centric focus and dedication to taking Universal to the next level of success."
